June Comedy-drama Dil Dhadakne Do The upcoming comedy drama film . The news comes one day after the president said on Twitter he would accept a recount of votes in three states if the losing candidate requested one (though he later walked back his tweet). Clinton initially called for the recount after the Associated Press said its analysis of voting information showed that the race was indeed too close to call. Then she tweeted on Saturday morning, "I'm glad we are finally agreeing on the result of #Election2016." AD AD A month later, on Nov. 24, the canvassing boards in Wisconsin, Michigan and Pennsylvania announced they would certify the results for president and Congress. Clinton said that until those results were official, there would be "no reason to contest them." Trump has consistently maintained there were, in fact, "rigged" elections, but his campaign has yet to present any evidence to support his claims. Trump's national campaign manager, Kellyanne Conway, told NBC's "Meet the Press" on Sunday morning that a recount was "certainly not a foregone conclusion." But on Saturday evening, Trump tweeted
