I have an object with a lot of keys in: import json import pprint import webbrowser from collections import defaultdict parser = json.loads(open('urls.json').read()) count = parser["data"]["count"] print(count) pprint.pprint(parser) I want to create a list of keys, but it seems like the list() function doesn't work for dictionaries. Is there a way to do this? A: Try a list comprehension. import json import pprint import webbrowser from collections import defaultdict parser = json.loads(open('urls.json').read()) count = parser["data"]["count"] key_list = [key for key in parser if hasattr(parser, key)] Cholinergic influences on Aplysia sensory neurons.
