The major resources of the city were forests and rivers, which provided the village with wood and water, and the primary economic sector was farming and raising livestock. In the early 1990s the population of Mizage was around 4,000 people. The territory of the city is situated in the lower part of the Caspian Sea, in the north-eastern part of Azerbaijan, on the base of a small river and a mountain. It borders with other towns and settlements: Shirvan, Sifatli, Valkari and Sarsan, as well as Burdur, Ağçek (Turkey), and the German town of Wismar (in Russia), and is connected with these towns by the Azerrail and Baku-Plovdiv railway lines. The length of the city territory is about 10 km and the width - about 2-3 km. The river and a river named Dizil flows across Mizage, and it is quite broad along the entire length of the river. The total length of this river is about 800 km. The average annual temperature is close to 10 degrees and the average annual rainfall is about 300 mm. History The history of the city begins with the early Middle Ages, when it was called Bədi (Ancient Turkic: Ekedu) on the territory of a small settlement and trade station at the confluence of the Dizil and Dira rivers. The settlement was a part of the Chalyapin district, which was part of the Great Khanate of Western Chagatai. Caspian Sea, AZER ( Azerbaijan, ), region The town is located on the southern coast of Azerbaijan, on the western shore of the Caspian Sea, 11 kilometers from Ağçek, 23 km from the nearest urban areas, Baku, Shir
