The Epson tx430w does not have a waste ink counter like the tx410 series, so you need a separate utility that will help you reset the print head assembly if its stuck. Developing and presenting the story early means that you will need less feedback from the audience to be sure that what you say is working. It also means that you have fewer chances of changing direction in your presentation. In a new project that I am working on, we are developing an approach to early identification of customer needs. We have used an analysis of 'what not to do' from the library of events in the not-to-do list as a starting point. In most projects, it is almost impossible to not make a mistake and the consequences are often financial. My research is centered around: » Marketing – understanding how to package and communicate a product or service to achieve the right message at the right time » Development – understanding how to change the way that work is done to achieve the right impact on the client or organisation » Management – understanding what drives people to make the right decisions. So, as you look at this series of posts on memory work, I hope that my examples help

Before I start calling people for help with SSH, I need to know for sure that the protocol is the same. Are there any reasons why I should choose one SSH implementation over another?
