The diodeÂ .... and I owe it all to the chateau A long time ago, one of the first things I did on the chateau was install the sawdust extractor, installing insulation beneath the concrete slab and installing a slab sink and faucet to ensure that there was at least the potential for self-sufficient living. There was nothing more disheartening than waking up and knowing that there was no water for... well, practically anything. Or worse, discovering that the roof was leaking, making me liable for damage to the building. It was quite a time...

Back then I was just saving myself, not necessarily money. But today, I can't wait to get my hands on any excess income. I have so many plans. Not only does my great grandmother have a small but exquisite collection of china (which means I can finally get rid of that mismatched set), I have ideas for the inside. For example, I have had a hankering for a wood burning stove ever since I moved here.

The house will also have a wood burning fireplace and a couple of antique gas log sets (the more to have for the next place). Anyway, back to what I was writing about... Over the course of the last few years, the ownership of the building has changed hands twice. Both times the owner (or maybe it was a group) offered to offer me a deal where they would sell everything to me (rent-free) once I restored the outside (including exterior lighting, roof, fixtures, and electrical) to his/her satisfaction, one of those offer I had accepted (but then backed out of, since it was too much work for me at the time). I can now say that I am very much the beneficiary of my hard work and diligence. All of those plans I mentioned are going to be put to use. I am very excited to see what I can do with the inside of the house. I am confident that I will have a fully functional, well-insulated, liveable, and light-filled home in no time.--- to get sql query from adapter I have a sql query string from an adapter. String query = "SELECT * FROM Questions where userId=0 order by rand() limit 0,1"; I want to place this query in my DBHelper class which is extended from SQLiteOpenHelper, but I don't have an access to sqliteadapter from my DBHelper class. So I need to somehow get this query from the adapter, but I'm unable to do it. If I get access to the sqliteadapter, I will do this query myself, by adding this new parameter to the where clause. A: I think you need to do it like this

SQLiteDatabase db = adapter.getWritableDatabase(); Cursor cursor =
db.rawQuery(query, null);

There is no need of GetQuery method There is a link about rawQuery Q:
