Approach: In this approach, gameplay is based on one or a combination of these factors: Leveraging physical human attributes, such as player size, speed, balance, agility, acceleration and jump.

Leveraging game mechanics, such as ball carrying, long-distance shooting, drop-kicks, take-ons and dispossessions. Leveraging Artificial Intelligence (AI). Using a combination of these factors, players' skills and strengths and their weaknesses are used to craft specific player animations.

Motion Capture: An elite Motion Capture Lab in Marking's Sports Technology and Motion Capture Department is responsible for the collection and analysis of data from motion capture suits worn by more than 1,400 elite players in motion capture suits. FIFA 22 will use data and player attributes collected from the top World Cup contenders. FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology" which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay. According to FIFA, "HyperMotion Technology's next phase is to combine motion capture data with biometric data, to allow for more accurate and detailed player replays." "The key feature of the data collected by the capture suits is that it is genuine, first-person perspective and matches how players naturally move," said Mark Roman, Director of Sports Technology. "FIFA has historically been a level up on other sports and this can be seen with the new animation creation techniques as well as touch-based control systems." In

FIFA 22, the overall offensive gameplay is based on the combination of a few key factors - Leveraging Physical Human Attributes, Leveraging Game Mechanics, Leveraging Artificial Intelligence - to create a unique gameplay. Players are able to control their movement more intuitively by utilizing height, weight, balance, acceleration and jump physics. A well-animated attack or defense requires the player to undergo a motion capture suit. Players in motion capture suits use a combination of skills and their attributes to influence the game. Using motion capture suits for a single player can be used for an entirely different player. For example, using motion capture for a midfielder is a great way to ensure that players have the precise jump and run animations they need to suit their position on the pitch. With the Touch-based control system,
