A friend from my grad school days (very knowledgeable in economics, finance and banking) was recently in Portugal. He was on a brief vacation from working for UBS (where he was head of a trading team). As you know, UBS has been a major player in Portugal. It has had a presence in the country for years. UBS will probably have a presence in Portugal until at least 2020. In a typical arrangement, UBS usually needs to hire lots of local talent: economists, sales people, etc. UBS will also typically require that the employees be able to work in English, something that is somewhat difficult for a European national, since the European employees

Mazak. "I don't think anyone would complain if that were allowed and go ahead and marry their cousin," said Smith. But, that kind of wedding invitation is not allowed in Britain's Lee Valley, where David Smith is the director of estates and grounds. The company's policy states that "favoured relations" in the service of the company are disqualified from the role of best man or godfather. The phrase is picked up by other British institutions, Smith said. "I've been talking about this, and I've been in London this month talking to lawyers and this is exactly what they are talking about," Smith said. "Whether it's a private company or not, [the phrase] is an indication of where it is today.”

Smith said that at his company, all relationships are documented, “If there’s any question about someone’s relationship to us, we investigate them.” “Do we ever exclude a best man or godfather? No,” said Smith.

“We would never give a wedding away in which a favoured relation is a part of the wedding party, but we have no issue with
