The goal of this program is to obtain information on the nature and extent of nerve growth factor control of tyrosine hydroxylase expression and turnover in adrenergic and noradrenergic neurons. Specificity of action will be achieved by first studying the role of nerve growth factor as a trophic factor on peripheral and central autonomic neurons in culture. The concomitant modulation of neurotransmitter biosynthetic enzymes will be evaluated. Dopaminergic and noradrenergic neurons are also being studied because neurotrophic factors from such sources have been shown to be both useful and beneficial in certain animal models of Parkinson's disease. To initiate the second aspect of this program, the enzymatic properties of the tyrosine hydroxylase will be characterized to see if they are similar in any way to those of the biosynthetic enzyme tyrosine aminotransferase of rat liver. Since the monoamine oxidase content of adrenergic neurons has been investigated, the enzymatic properties of this enzyme will also be characterized in order to assess the extent of cross-talk between the autonomic and catecholaminergic neurons that are involved in the biosynthesis of adrenal catecholamines. If such cross-talk does exist, it will be studied and its significance to the neuroendocrinology of the adrenal gland will be determined.
