I suspect that SVCHOST is being hijacked by a malicious program (a trojan) but i can't be 100% sure. If someone could assist with providing the command line (or a working win3k console batch) that would be much appreciated. A: There is a command line tool that displays all the currently running svchosts (as well as those that are starting and stopping) and each one's command line and status: svchost.exe -k -l Also see this post. [Experimental study on the relationship between the progression of glomerular scarring and the change of vascular permeability in the glomerular mesangium (author's transl)]. The uptake of 70 kd dextran fluoescamine (DEX) was examined in the glomerular mesangial region of the rat. The uptake of the tracer was observed within 30 minutes after the injection of DEX, and disappeared completely within 4 hours. The uptake of DEX decreased within 7 days after the injection of monoclonal antibodies to rat IgG (Clone B2A2) to rat serum. We have investigated the relationship between the change of uptake of the tracer and the magnitude of the leakage of the rat glomerular capillary wall induced by the administration of a different dose of monoclonal antibodies to rat IgG (Clone B2A2). In 1 hour after the injection of 150 microliters of 250 micrograms/ml of the monoclonal antibody, we examined the uptake of DEX in the glomerular mesangial region. There was a significant correlation between the change of uptake of DEX and the change of vascular permeability. On the other hand, there was no significant correlation between the change of uptake of DEX and the change of sialic acid in the rat glomerular mesangium. From the present results, we concluded that in this model, the uptake of DEX
