invention generally relates to an image processing apparatus and an image processing method, and more particularly to an image processing apparatus and an image processing method capable of setting a plurality of color temperature conditions to an input image for color correction. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, the electric appliances such as color LCD televisions (TVs) have been widely used in living rooms, bedrooms, and the like, so that it has become possible to view images in more various environments. There are some electric appliances having an optical sensor and a microcomputer therein. A color temperature of an ambient light is detected from the sensor and the microcomputer adjusts the image to be displayed according to a detected color temperature (color temperature control). It is desirable for the optical sensor to detect a color temperature of the ambient light in a wider range of light intensities. For example, there is a known conventional image processing apparatus in which two kinds of sensors that detect different ranges of color temperatures of the ambient light are provided, and the range of color temperatures of the ambient light is detected by selecting one of the two kinds of sensors and detecting the color temperature thereof. In this way, the sensitivity of detecting the color temperature of the ambient light can be improved, as compared with a case where one kind of sensor is used to detect the color temperature of the ambient light, and the color temperature of the ambient light can be detected with high precision (for example, refer to Japanese Patent No. 3557811). However, a user can simply switch the color temperature control function on/off to control to have the image displayed in the environment corresponding to the color temperature of the ambient light. Therefore, the user cannot enjoy the presence environment having the color temperature corresponding to the color temperature of the ambient light. can be considered as a posteriori justification for our conclusion, that at the edge of the radio lobes most of the electrons are concentrated at energies around 1 GeV. At the present moment, our results can penetrated into a female terminal of an electric conductor. In particular, this invention relates to a press, which has a hollow cylinder with a middle part of the length between a base and a head having a larger diameter than the diameter of the female terminal inserted into the hollow cylinder, the hollow cylinder and the male terminal being slidable relative to each other between the base and the head. The press is further provided with a fixing element, which is pivotable about an axis between the middle part and the head and which is disposed between the head and the female terminal to be movable in a direction parallel to the axis. The fixing element has a contact surface for pressing the female terminal against the male terminal, and the contact surface is formed to be smaller in diameter than the diameter of the female terminal. 2.

Description of the Prior Art A press as described above is known from the German published patent application 32 46 996. In this known press the contact surface is in the form of a sector of a circular arc. However, the design of this known press has certain drawbacks. If the male terminal is inserted into the female terminal too tightly, only very small areas of the contact surface are subjected to pressure against the male terminal. This may cause insufficient contact between the female and the male terminals.Q: Getting a Promise to resolve before a resolved Promise I have two Promise based functions which work well as seperate, but I would like them to work together to some extent. var generateToken = function(seed) { return new Promise(function(resolve, reject) { // some code here resolve(); }) } var loadToken = function(token) { return new Promise(function(resolve, reject) { // some code here resolve(); }) } generateToken(seed).then(function(token) { loadToken(token); }); But this code doesn't work as I would expect - generateToken and
