The present invention generally relates to an apparatus for producing tetrafluoroethylene hexafluoride (i.e., "F.sub.3 CF.sub.3 ") and, more particularly, to an apparatus for the fluidized bed chlorination of tetrafluoroethylene to produce F.sub.3 CF.sub.3 in high yield. The high-yield production of F.sub.3 CF.sub.3 from tetrafluoroethylene by the fluidized bed method can take place at high throughput rates if the reaction occurs under conditions which favor the formation of the desired product. F.sub.3 CF.sub.3 formation will, however, also occur to some extent at lower chlorination temperatures. When production of F.sub.3 CF.sub.3 is carried out using a fluidized bed, it is desirable to minimize the presence of other by-products, since these by-products tend to contaminate the product F.sub.3 CF.sub.3 and thereby reduce the value of the latter. It is an object of the present invention to provide a process for preparing F.sub.3 CF.sub.3 from tetrafluoroethylene with reduced formation of other by-products. It is a further object of the present invention to provide an apparatus which is useful in the preparation of F.sub.3 CF.sub.3 which contains less than about 0.1 mole percent impurities. It is a still further object of the present invention to provide a process which minimizes utilization of the hydrogen-containing by-products of the reaction. These and other objects of the present invention will be apparent from the following description.
