In most parts of the United Kingdom, there is a daily service of freight traffic between towns and cities on the national railway network, with some lines, such as the Great Central Railway line from Peterborough to Birmingham, having continuous freight services between the major cities, such as the former London Midland Region network. Railways like this have traditionally been operated by means of freight wagons, which transport goods on a vehicle, with the idea of a round-the-clock service every day of the year. As a result of safety standards and the need to ensure the safety of cargo loaded, these wagons are constructed to be relatively robust and strong, with many of them being high sided, covered wagons. These covered wagons are found on both freight and passenger routes. Without detailing every aspect of a freight train, the basic duties of a freight wagon are to be a road vehicle, and to carry and transport goods. They have been involved in the carriage of railway merchandise since the early days of railways, so many goods wagons are still used today. These wagons are used for both goods and passenger carrying. There are a wide variety of goods wagons, each suited to a certain type of load, some of which include the goods wagon. Goods wagons range from solely acting as a load handling vehicle to solely acting as a passenger carriage. Goods wagons are also used for rolling stock and maintenance vehicles. It is possible to enter the Steam Workshop and download a Scenarios folder by searching for COV AB Vans on the Steam Workshop and selecting the Download Scenarios option. Summer 2018 is nearly over! Shortly after hosting the closing Q&A event of the 2015 tiers, we began making plans for the next release. We discussed things like making new classes, adding restocks, rearranging things on the main toolbar, polishing things up, etc. For example, we discussed the need to remove some classes from the main toolbar and replace them with more useful classes. We also discussed the need to make the shop filter squishier, just in general adding/changing/shortening things. But above that, we also discussed how useful a tier would be. How about monthly updates to be added to a tier (we would get these free to facilitate)? What if at the end of the year we had most of the tiers ready but were now talking about a donationware tier? We didn't know, and from our perspective it was all a bit of a pipe dream to want to do another tier. However, there is a reason for this. Our friend Sam took us to see a classic house party cartoon, Duck Tales. Yes, I am aware of the irony of my theme going to a "cartoon" to praise it...but look on the bright side! It sorta makes it a Duck Dynasty experience rather than a Boba Fett one! It's a funny duck cartoon! So this is our third tier, Floaty Flatmates. A tier named by our writer Dan (I can't remember if I asked him to pick a name or he wanted to be known as a schmoe). Sam and I liked this name from the start, and started talking about it and planning classes. There was one main question: should we have any tanks, and if so, what should they be? It was light but high priority. There were two places to start. We talked about not using the three Parthans that exist as some of our highly prized and expensive DLC. Also, we wanted to introduce new tankable vehicles, but those would have to fall outside of the existing three (and pay the price for lacking in balance for that tier). The core of what we wanted was a choice of 8 tankable vehicles. This would dovetail nicely with the Steam Trade Data, which we wanted to release alongside. Sam shared a link to something in a Usunastudio page that demonstrated a U-TDA-powered calculator that would allow us to quickly calculate fuel and time. This
