The Eftaxin Eftaxin is a fusion protein for the enhancement of the osteoclast system derived from a fusion between human IgG1 immunoglobulins and the tissue factor from bovine thrombocytes. The long-term clearance of the protein is therefore dependent on the rate of elimination of the protein from the blood, the production of new protein, and the binding of the protein to the thrombocytes. The signs and symptoms of the Lambert-Eaton syndrome are: 1. weakness and aches in the legs 2. loss of reflexes 3. muscle cramps and 4. numbness 4. reduced sensation and hearing. The diagnosis is confirmed by a positive immune reaction against the oximecytotoxic factor (OX-CMF) on thrombocytes. The only curative treatment is removal of the cause of the disease. In case of an established diagnosis x-ray and MRI are useful tools to exclude other organs as primary tumours or metastases.Q: How to create a batch file that takes input from user and open a vbs script in notepad?
