I understand from Dan that we do not yet have the details of the deal structure. Can you pls send me more information on this issue? I think we need to understand the deal structure in order to determine how ENA will be utilized. I look forward to receiving your response. Regards, Fangming George Huang@EES 02/21/2000 10:28 AM To: Fangming Zhu/HOU/ECT@ECT cc: Daniel.Lassere@enron.com, Jeffrey Miller/HOU/ECT@ECT Subject: Re: deal 133911 Thank you for your note, I have signed the authorization and forwarded it to you. The deal structure is as follows: ENA takes the risk of financing Dabhol that way we can reuse our own letter of credit and offshore Guarantee will be under NDA provided by DPC The deal structure takes into consideration that if Dabhol does not go into operation or does not start power generation DPC will not be paid. If Enron is using the money to pay Dabhol, DPC will be owed the difference

Q: How to import a python class from a file with unknown format In my python code, I have the following structure: /foo/foo.py /foo/test.py foo.py has the following class: class A(): def a(self): print "foo" and test.py has: from foo import A a = A() a.a() After running test.py I will get: foo My question is: What are the possible ways to do the import dynamically from test.py? My current workaround is: a = sys.modules[__name__].__dict__[__name__].__getattr__('A')() a.a() Which is not as good as I want to do. Can I do it better? A: In general, one would look for a way to make a single function call that does the entire import-as-object-creation - instead of having a different function for each object to be created. Since it sounds like the problem you are dealing with is making the part of the import dynamic enough to call at runtime, there are multiple approaches to that: Parse the code for a function with a particular name that exists in the module
