Adobe has released Adobe Acrobat 9 Pro software. This new version introduces a major new feature: its own e-mail distribution application called Adobe Acrobat 9 e-mail Pro. Adobe Acrobat 9 Pro enables you to automatically send PDF files to specified e-mail addresses. This new distribution application can, for example, e-mail a document containing an invoice, a product or service quote to a client's address. This plug-in for Adobe Acrobat products enables the same capabilities with its additional workflow options. This plug-in enables you to automate the generation of personalized PDF documents with your company information and optionally can customize the text and image of such personalized PDF documents. When inserting your customer or client's e-mail addresses into the document using an on-screen cursor, AutoDocMail will automatically generate an e-mail and send the document with all the necessary addresses to the recipient. It is suitable for those enterprises wishing to turn information into marketing tools and for those wishing to cost-effectively manage customer information with additional business intelligence applications. Follow-up with customers with an easy-to-complete document will increase customer satisfaction. All you need to do is insert your customer or client's addresses or e-mail addresses into a document. And, the default time interval for sending e-mails is on a customisable schedule that you can edit in order to suit your needs.
