On Money, Saving and Investing: On Money, Saving and Investing: Many people don't know where their money comes from and how their financial assets are invested. When a client asks for financial advice, I typically ask them to answer the following three questions: What are you saving for? What is your investment style? What is your financial goal? That's an important first step in any financial planning session, so we're going to answer those questions. 1. What are you saving for? This is, arguably, the most important question. I've heard clients who don't know how to save and those who saved too much for too long. I've also heard clients who were in a financial tailspin for years and now realize that they never saved a dime, and clients who have taken a long time to save and are now in great shape financially. This is personal. The first is true for me and my family. The second is for the folks who befriended me on BusinessBuddha. The third, of course, is true for all of us: the Great Wealth Creator. What is your saving goal? Given that, what are you saving for? A car? A down payment on a house? That's good to know, but we should break it down a little further. Are you saving for a car? If so, how much? Are you saving for a house? If so, how much? You don't need to be in one of these financial hardship scenarios to answer this question. All
