Crack.Q: How to properly resolve promises in AngularJS Since we are using AngularJS, we have to work with the async data flow and handling the events through promises. Here is an example: `$scope.submitRequest = function() { var self = this; this.$http.post(self.url).success(function(data) { self.loadData(data);`

self.finish(); }); }

This is a simple version of how things are being done. Should I use `$q.defer()` to properly handle the promises? Please, let me know of your advice. A:

var self = this; this.$http.post(self.url).success(function(data) { self.loadData(data);
```

self.finish(); }).error( function(data){
self.loadData(data);
});
```

This is a simple version of how things are being done. Should I use `$q.defer()` to properly handle the promises?

Absolutely! You're writing this code correctly, just don't be fooled by promises
