If so this is the place where you will find the answer..I have a girlfriend. of fixative on the detection of respiratory viruses in the nasopharynx. The aim of this study was to determine if the use of different fixatives affects the detection of viruses in the nasopharynx. Nasopharyngeal specimens collected from influenza A-infected children were processed for viral isolation and detection by immunofluorescence using two different fixatives: acetone and formalin. Acetone fixation increased the detection of four viruses in comparison with formalin. Acetone fixation facilitates the detection of Rhinovirus and parechovirus. We conclude that acetone is the best fixative for the detection of viruses in the nasopharynx. The present invention relates to a method for assembling an electronic instrument having a main body and a lid. One such electronic instrument is an electronic calculator such as the kind disclosed in Japanese patent application Ser. No. 50-141019 filed May 7, 1979 by the same applicant as the instant application. A calculator of this kind includes a main body and a lid, and a button is provided on the front side of the main body for the operator to depress in order to input data to the calculator. The Japanese patent application Ser. No. 50-141019 mentioned above discloses how the main body and the lid can be assembled together by use of a conventional snap-fit connection. Specifically, when the main body and the lid are to be assembled together, the front side of the main body is sandwiched between the front end of the lid and a rubber piece provided on the front side of the lid so that the front end of the main body is secured by the rubber piece in a snapped-in manner. This method assures that the front side of the main body is not projected out of the front end of the lid, and also assures a smooth surface of the main body. Accordingly, the assembled electronic calculator can be made to have a trim-appearance. A new tool for evaluating prediction rules: the generalizability analysis.
