As shown in FIG. 1, a conventional active matrix display device includes, as its most important constituent element, an image displaying unit 1 that has a switching device for each pixel 2 of a matrix display screen, where such switching devices function to select the image signal applied to each pixel. The image displaying unit 1 is formed on a glass substrate 3. Although not shown in the figure, on the outer surface of the glass substrate 3 are a transparent electrode, arranged in a matrix, to serve as an electrode for applying the image signal to the image displaying unit 1, and a scanning electrode for scanning the image signal which is applied to the transparent electrode, and a signal electrode to supply the image signal which is selected by the switching device. Furthermore, an insulating layer for storing charge is arranged under the scanning electrode. The conventional active matrix display device is characterized in that the scanning electrode is arranged to be a comb-shaped electrode, as shown in FIG. 2. That is, the scanning electrode 3 includes a plurality of scanning electrodes 4, 5, and c6a93da74d
